Dr. Pauline Truong

“Breast Cancer”

Dr Pauline Truong is a Radiation Oncologist at the BC Cancer Agency, Vancouver Island Centre and Clinical Professor of Radiation Oncology at the University of British Columbia.

Dr Truong enjoys a busy clinical practice caring for patients with breast cancer. She serves as Medical Leader of the Radiation Therapy Research Business Unit at VIC, which operates clinical trials of RT innovations, including partial breast radiation therapy, 3-D conformal RT and intensity modulated RT.

She has led grant-funded studies using population-based outcomes data to evaluate patterns of care and develop risk prediction models for breast cancer patients treated with mastectomy or breast conserving therapy.

She participates enthusiastically in medical student and resident teaching and takes pleasure in mentoring postgraduate fellows pursuing training in breast cancer clinical research.
